

MEET YOUR LEGAL REQUIREMENTS FOR 'DUTY OF CARE' THIS SUMMER...
Adequate sun shelter needs to be provided for members at outdoor events.

SunSmart (Cancer Council Victoria) reports on their website that approximately 1600 Australians die each year from skin cancer, with over 380 thousand are treated for the disease. An exceptional climate here in Australia enables us to freely participate in a wide range of outdoor work and leisure activities. It's this factor that increases the danger of extreme sun exposure and skin damage, and also boosts skin cancer rates.

As our summers grow warmer and the sun intensifies, the need for better sun protection has now become a necessary requirement for many workplaces, sporting groups, schools and various other community events. It's these groups that now need to take on a 'duty of care' responsibility for any of their members that participate in outdoor activities. Duty of care should include the provision of sun shelters for members to ensure an adequate level of protection from UV rays.

At numerous community events, portable gazebo shelters are now necessary requirements to provide people with adequate sun shelter. Altegra, a leading provider of all weather portable shelters has customised their range to cater for this demand. "We have seen a remarkable increase in demand for our Altegra gazebos" said Simon Braunthal, director for Altegra. "Anyone that hosts outdoor events or activities has really taken the legal ramifications of the 'duty of care' very seriously."

Simon explained that standard gazebos purchased from retail chain stores are often very low quality and result in being difficult for people to erect. They also have a very limited life span due to their design and use of lightweight materials. Altegra gazebos, using one of the strongest frames in the marketplace overcome this challenge. They deliver a truly cost effective weather solution.

Altegra gazebos provide a high quality, practical outdoor weather solution.

- Practical design makes it very easy to use and transport.
- Provides excellent UV protection, and all weather comfort.
- Range of waterproof fabric colours and accessories available.
- Superior design and construction results in; a system that is easy to use, increased strength of materials and workmanship, extensive accessories available inc wall kits, leg weights, gutter systems, awnings and more.

As we come into summer months, any schools, community organisations, sporting groups or event organisations that are responsible for outdoor activities need to ensure they legally comply with their "duty of care". Supply adequate sun shelter for all your participants.
